In a world with high technology civilization, where society is based on cities, a young kid wonders alone in the forest. He finds the homes of animals and builds a bonfire with wood he collected. With his amazing dream he thinks he can make the fire burn not only in the ground but also between the trees. One day the boy meets by chance a cute girl who disturbs this sleepy world. Together they try to figure out what is happening in this world. As they start exploring the strange technology they enter a mysterious computer. After the event, the boy's dreams of learning about the world and the people around him will be stronger than ever. As he gets to know new people and technologies he will be able to create a new future and save the world. Knuckle Dragger is a puzzle based platform game in which you play as "The Kid". The title of the game is really an ironic reference to the old games "Thief" or "Penguin" where you would have to get in touch with a secret world and use some memento to get closer to a fairy tale universe. In this game, there is no secret world that you need to get near to open. However, inside this world there are some electronic devices that you need to open to get near a hidden world. It's not an easy task because if you succeed in opening them the game won't work properly (for example you won't be able to jump as well as if you hadn't succeed in opening it) and you could find a stone that blocks you in. If you fail you will be forced to start the game over again with nothing, so it is important to pay attention to the details of the game. ## What's new in Failspace:

I think what I'll be doing is using a heart dress body with a skirt body and then make the sleeves and leg piece. Then just make the top body and paint the lower half of it with matte green and put the skirt piece on. Seems like I read a thread a while back where someone was doing this but with a black body (which is what I was doing) and it was quite fun. I'm gonna try that and put my daughter's hair up in a bun. I'm actually going to be doing it for a doa6 clan competition this weekend, and I have come up with something new lol. I will post a design up later and show what I ended up with for the base. I will also link whatever k-acekin ends up with for the top. I think what I'll be doing is using a heart dress body with a skirt body and then make the sleeves and leg piece. Gameplay is simple, your goal is to make money and you earn money by doing stuff you have to do in the real world. To do those things you have to use the items you were given at the beginning of the game, otherwise you'll go bankrupt. There are some side quests and you can get more money by doing those. The side quests are kinda annoying but that's just a minor detail on how to earn money. Once you have enough money, you can buy items in the shop. Some items help you open locked doors, some items change the world in your favor, some items give you more money and so on. This is done through a Player Controlled Decision Tree. Basically you have a path of choices with different outcomes and you have to select your item to open the door. This system really takes away the fear of failure, because in the end you'll have no chance, you'll have
